WELCOME NOTE

Dear Friends,

Welcome to the Central Eurasian Studies Society (CESS) 20th Annual Conference at the George Washington University!

We are hosting you at the Central Asia Program (CAP) and the Institute for European, Russian and Eurasian Studies (IERES), part of the George Washington University's Elliott School of International Affairs, one of the world's leading schools of international affairs and the largest school of international affairs in the United States. Located in the heart of Washington, D.C., its mission is to educate the next generation of international leaders, conduct research that advances understanding of important global issues, and engage the policy community in the United States and around the world.

We are grateful for the trust CESS put in George Washington University by giving us the opportunity to host, for the second time, the annual conference after having received the 16th one in 2015.

This year we will feature two keynote speakers, Harsha Ram, from the University of California-Berkeley, and Mohira Suyarkulova, from the American University of Central Asia in Bishkek, discussing respectively "The Caucasus: From Geopolitics to Geopoetics," and "Becoming an Activist Scholar: towards more Politically Engaged and Socially Accountable Research Practices in Central Asian Studies".

In parallel to the conference, we offer you a full festival celebrating Central Asian cultures, comprised of a curated exhibition, lectures on material culture and traditions, music and dance performances, photo exhibition, as well as the sale of exclusive wearable art from the region by local artisans.

We hope you stay and mingle with friends and colleagues during our Opening Reception on Friday, October 11 at 5.:30pm in the 2nd floor Hall and enjoy wonderful Central Asian food generously cooked and provided by our colleagues from the Embassies of Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, and Uzbekistan, and Uyghur associations.

Please join me in thanking the Elliott School of International Affairs for its support, as well as the CESS and IERES staff, who put an incredible amount of work and enthusiasm to make this event happen!

KEYNOTE SPEAKERS

THE CAUCASUS: FROM GEOPOLITICS TO GEOPOETICS

16:00-17:30, Friday, October 11

City View Room (7th Floor)

The Caucasus is primarily seen as a contested territory, an interregional space caught between rival empires as well as local polities. At the same time its topographic and ethnolinguistic diversity has captured the imagination of travelers over the centuries. This talk explores the tensions and convergences between territorial ambition and the literary imagination as exemplified by the Russian tradition. It suggests that literature, rather than simply corroborating or resisting the goals of the state, articulates the problem of sovereignty in ways that touch on the aesthetic as well as political dimensions of power.

Harsha Ram is Associate Professor of Slavic Languages and Literatures and Comparative Literature at the University of California, Berkeley. Dr. Ram's research interests and expertise are: Russian and European romanticism and modernism, Russian and European avant-gardes, Russian, European, Near Eastern and South Asian poetic traditions, Indian literature, Italian literature, Georgian history and literature, theories of world literature, literary theory, comparative poetics, genre theory, literary history, comparative modernisms and modernities, vernacular and high culture, cultural and political history of Russia-Eurasia and the Caucasus, postcolonial studies, theories of nationalism, imperialism and cosmopolitanism, the city and literature.

BECOMING AN ACTIVIST SCHOLAR: TOWARDS MORE POLITICALLY ENGAGED AND SOCIALLY ACCOUNTABLE RESEARCH PRACTICES IN CENTRAL ASIAN STUDIES

17:30-19:00, Saturday, October 12

Room 113

Based on a personal journey as a researcher, teacher and activist living and working in/on Central Asia, Mohira Suyarkulova will share her reflections on whether and how research done in and on the region of 'Central Asia' can have an emancipatory potential. Born out of the orientalist tradition and Cold War rivalry, can area studies serve the interests of the "wretched of the earth"? Who is an academic accountable to? How can we engage in a more responsible intellectual labour under the conditions of permanent crisis and precarity? What is at stake when we ask certain questions and pledge our energies to specific intellectual pursuits? These are some of the dilemmas that this keynote invites fellow Central Asianists to reflect on.

Mohira Suyarkulova is a queer feminist communist and a scholar of Central Asia, living in Bishkek, Kyrgyzstan. Since completing her PhD in International Relations at St Andrews University (UK) in 2011, she has held a number of research and teaching positions in Europe and Kyrgyzstan. She is currently an Associate Professor in the Sociology department at the American University of Central Asia. Dr. Suyarkulova's latest work focuses on the politics of gender and sexuality in Central Asia, engaging in participatory action research located at the intersection of scholarship and activism.

THE PITTSBURGH PAPERS ON CENTRAL EURASIAN STUDIES

Call for Papers

The Editorial Board of The Pittsburgh Papers on Central Eurasian Studies invites proposals for medium-length research papers, tackling relevant issues in the wider field of Central Eurasian Studies. Published on an occasional basis by Pittsburgh University Press, the Pittsburgh Papers on Central Eurasian Studies feature original, peer-reviewed research in the Humanities and Social Sciences focusing on Central Eurasia. The series is published in an online monograph format, with an expected length of approximately 40-90 pages. It offers a unique opportunity for scholars to publish works that are longer than the average academic journal article and shorter than a book manuscript. A rigorous double-blind review process ensures that papers in the series maintain a high quality and make an important contribution to the advancement of scholarly inquiry in our field.

We welcome paper proposals from disciplines ranging across the Humanities and Social Sciences on issues pertinent to the Central Eurasian cultural and political space. Proposals may thus discuss the five Central Asian states (Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan, Uzbekistan), Afghanistan and the Chinese borderlands of the Xinjiang Uyghur Autonomous Region, the Caucasus with Armenia, Azerbaijan, Georgia as well as Dagestan and Chechnya or the northern regions of Iran and Pakistan.

Prospective authors are asked to send a 1,500 words proposal to the chair of the editorial board: jeanne.feaux@uni-tuebingen.de. The proposal should include:

1. A short abstract (150 words)
2. A rationale for the significance of the research to be showcased in the paper
3. Justification for the paper's intended contribution to the advancement of Central Eurasian Studies in methodological, theoretical or empirical terms
4. Synopsis of the paper's key research questions and central argument
5. A detailed table of content
6. Bibliography

The Editorial Board of the Pittsburgh Papers in Central Eurasian Studies will respond to prospective authors within six weeks from receipt of their proposal, addressing its scientific merit and interest to the series' potential readership. In case of acceptance, the Committee will agree with the author on a submission date, provide style guidelines and further editorial advice as required.

SOME OF THE FOUNDING FATHERS AND MOTHERS OF CENTRAL EURASIAN STUDIES HAVE LEFT US IN 2019. PLEASE JOIN US IN COMMEMORATING THEM.

Kemal H. Karpat (1923-2019) was born in the village of Armutlu in the Dobruja region of Romania. Descending from Crimean Tatar immigrants, Karpat was proud of his heritage and frequently returned to his family's roots in his scholarship. In the midst of World War II, he left Romania for Turkey where he ultimately entered Istanbul University Law School, graduating in 1947. While in law school, he also received Turkish citizenship.

After moving to the United States, he taught first at Montana State University and in 1967 he settled permanently in the History Department at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. Professor Karpat also did much to promote Ottoman, Turkish, and Central Asian studies. He was the founding president of the Turkish Studies Group from 1971-74, renamed the Turkish Studies Association (1972), and now known as the Ottoman and Turkish Studies Association. He served as the president of the Middle East Studies Association (1985). He was the founding chair of the Central Asian Studies Association, serving from 1985-95. His expertise on Turkey, Central Asia, and the Middle East at large was sought by both the Carter and Reagan administrations.

Ilse Laude-Cirtautas (1926-2019), Ilse Apa (or Opa in Uzbek) was one of less than a handful of scholars who introduced Central Asian studies to Western scholarship. During the Cold War, when no one paid any attention to Soviet Central Asia, Dr. Ilse Cirtautas began her tireless efforts to make sure Central Asian societies and their literature and culture were recognized and appreciated. Uzbek, Kyrgyz, Kazakh, Uighur, and Tajik students and scholars called her Ilse Opa, Ilse Xonim or Ilse Apa, showing enormous respect for her mentorship and her dedication for generating interest and strengthening scholarship in the fields of Central Asian languages and literatures. Ilse Laude-Cirtautas received her Ph.D. from the University of Hamburg (Germany). After moving to the United States, I. Laude-Cirtautas taught first at Indiana University (1965-1968), where she introduced the field of Comparative Turkic Studies. She accomplished the same at the University of Washington where she has been teaching since 1968.

Thomas T. Allsen (1940-2019) was one of the most outstanding scholars of the history and culture of Medieval Eurasia and of the Mongol Empire in particular.

His books and articles are cited in virtually every work that deals with the peoples of that time and place. Allsen did much to reorient "Mongol Imperial Studies" from a largely political narrative to one that encompassed aspects of ideological, commercial and material culture and the transfer of cultures across Eurasia. His excellent knowledge of Chinese, Persian, Arabic, Russian and Western European languages, his thorough command of the sources dealing with the peoples of Eurasia and jargon-free style of exposition made his work essential reading for scholars in the field, scholars working in World history and at the same time open to broader audiences. After briefly teaching at Western Kentucky University (1979-1980), he spent the remainder of his teaching career (1980-2002) in the History Department of Trenton State College, now The College of New Jersey. He won numerous awards including fellowships from the prestigious National Endowment for the Humanities (1998-1999, 2003-2004) and from the Guggenheim Foundation (2002-2003) in the field of East Asian Studies.
